earth by the blanket of snow surely offsets the numerous disappointments.

Peary may never see the North pole. He is shy about $60,000 of the needed amount to go out and surely get it this trip: and unless some one starts something for him, an ice cream and strawberry festival, a picnic supper, steamboat excursion or an amateur entertainment, we fear Peary will go bump on his plan of discovering that North pole that no man has ever yet been able to quite get.

Not content with the beautiful the weather man sent down upon us Saturday, he tore loose another section yesterday afternoon that continued falling for an hour or two, but fortunately it melted nearly as rapidly as it fell. Today the sun burst upon us with all its warmth and brilliancy which has caused the snow to melt and soak into the earth, a blessing that was thankfully received by the farmers of the great northwest.

Harry E. Ricker, business manager of the Metropolitan opera house at St. Paul, is under arrest. He claims two men held him up and attempted to cut him with knives, grabbing a package of money, $2800, and escaped. All this occurred upstairs in the opera house Saturday night, where he was going to place the money in the safe. He couldn't describe the men but claims he immediately returned to the box office where he told his story and Manager Scott notified. After talking with Scott and Chief O'Conner, Ricker was locked up and the books will be examined.

Weather Spasms.

Easter fell this year on March 31.
Easter, evidently, had a hunch. Gee, girls, suppose it had fallen on yesterday! W—hat did you say?

At the risk of inviting a further visitation of Providence in the shape of a deluge of the beautiful, it is delicately suggested that Saturday's valedictory effort of Old Man Boreas was a howling success.

One swallow never made a summer and nobody ever said it did. A foot and a half of snow don't help much either.

The persistent report that the local ski club is planning a "Thrilling Fourth of July" run, is not denied.

Now don't you fellows who elevated the price of ice cream soda wish you
