Updates & Miscellaneous

Here is a photo that I do not believe has ever been published before. It is Scout Hutson and his wife, Jennie Farley, probably taken in the 1890's after the Farley's left Kansas and moved to the Tacoma, Washington area, before moving on to Sedro Woolley, Washington, where they were neighbors of Scout George Green.

This photo was provided by Joe Burgess of Noblesville, Indiana, who's wife, Virginia Crist Burgess, was a granddaughter of Nancy Belle Farley Middleton Jackson.

Nancy Belle Farley Middleton Jackson was the sister of Scout Hutson

Farley and the daughter of Scout Lewis Farley.

This photo, above, I do not believe has ever been published either. It is part of the families of Scouts Green and Farley, in Sedro Wooley, Washington about 1912, believed to be taken in the front yard at the Farley residence on Ferry Street.

We will be looking at the family of Scout George Burgess Clark in this newsletter, but I did want to publish these above photos as they help put faces with some of the names in these old families.

As an additional note, in the last newsletter, concerning Scout Henry Tucker, I may have stopped short of completing the story of the Tuckers and descendants. For one thing, the day after the last newsletter was published, after a long wait, I received Charlotte Ingersoll (Mrs. Henry) Tucker's obituary. It does contain some interesting history, so I will include it in whole:

COLORFUL PIONEER FIGURE LOST IN DEATH YESTERDAY

Mrs. Charlotte Tucker Dies At Roosevelt At Age Of 92 Years.

Mrs. Charlotte Ingersoll - Tucker, colorful pioneer figure who, with other members of her family, has played a prominent role in the history of the west, died at 4:45 Tuesday morning at her home at Roosevelt.

Mrs. Tucker, who was 92 years old on April 11, had lived on many other frontiers before coming to Kiowa County with her husband, the late Captain Henry H. Tucker, and their children in 1901. She had been in failing health for a number of years and was in a coma for several days before her death.

Funeral services were held at 11:00 a.m. Wednesday at Roosevelt with burial in the Hobart Cemetery beside the graves of her husband and daughter, Charlotte.

The Tucker family was one of the very first of the early day settlers in Kiowa County. They settled on a homestead a half mile north of the Gladson school house and built the first claim "shanty" in that area. They helped organize Gladson district, the first school in which was taught by their daughter, Charlotte, who became ill later that year and died. Mrs. Tucker also helped organize the first Sunday school and church in the Gladson district.

Born in McHenry county, Illinois, April 11, 1847, she was the last member of the family of Mr. and Mrs. Sutherland Ingersoll who with eight children journeyed westward over the old trails which lead from the city of Chicago to Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, in the year of 1859. At that time, western Missouri and eastern Kansas were engaged in border warfare over the problem of slavery. The Kansas Red Legs and the Missouri bushwackers headed by Quantrill and other raiders of those days were in their prime.

Abraham Lincoln and Douglas the "little giant", staged one of their famous debates in the country schoolhouse near Crystal Lake, Illinois, and Mrs. Tucker, then a child, begged her father for the privilege to attend. This rare chance was denied her because "it was not a fit thing for a little girl to attend public meetings" in those days.

Later, in days of her childhood at Fort Leavenworth, she attended the public schools and David Josiah Brewer who later became chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court, was her teacher. Among her classmates were the Cody children, one of whom, William, later became famous as "Buffalo Bill" the plainsman and Indian scout.

During the Civil War her father entered a Kansas regiment as did two of her brothers. Her mother died while the men were on the battle lines and it was two years before the news of death reached the front.

Following the war, the family moved to the Saline and Solomon valleys of Kansas at a time when Indian raids were a frequent thing along the western edge of the frontier. An Ohio settlement was made at Salina and among those in the colony was Captain Henry H. Tucker who in later years married Charlotte Ingersoll. During one entire winter in the Solomon valley, the Ingersoll family, along with the 16 other families composing the settlements, was protected by a log stockade fort.

During all of the days of thrilling events on the old frontier, Mrs. Tucker was often threatened with danger but always said she was not afraid. Her brothers, who were scouts censured her for the chances she took as she rode across the prairies for many miles alone in pioneer days. She was an expert horsewoman in days of her youth, a schoolteacher, public orator and writer. In the early days of the Woman's Suffrage Movement, she was tutored by Susan B. Anthony and Colonel Anthony, the famous editor of pre-Civil War days.

Among the many interesting incidents in her life, Mrs. Tucker often told her friends of attending a theatre in Fort Leavenworth where John Wilkes Booth was the star actor. During the winter of 1860, Booth was with a repertoire company that played the military city.

Her husband, who died in 1908, was an Indian scout and was a first lieutenant of Co. B, 143rd Illinois, in the Civil War under Colonel John P. St. John. It was after the Indian war while he was helping organize schools in Ottawa County, Kansas, that he met Charlotte Ingersoll, teacher of one of the first schools. They married in 1870. Nine children were born to them, six of them still living.

Two of the Tucker sons, Dudley R. and Howard A. Tucker, were publishers of early day newspapers in Hobart and Roosevelt. The latter is now a freelance oil news writer and has been in Kiowa county for the past two weeks covering the oil developments here. It was by him that most of the information concerning Mrs. Tucker's interesting career was furnished.

Surviving sons and daughters include H. H. Tucker Jr., of Dallas; Howard A. Tucker, William L. Tucker and Mrs. Susan E. Boles of Oklahoma City; Dudley R. Tucker of Pauls Valley and Miss Marian I. Tucker of Roosevelt, who lived with her mother.

This obituary did answer several questions. Daughters Susan and Marian were both still living in 1939. Apparently the Tucker family had held on to the 1902 Land Lottery claim as Charlotte and Marian were living on or near it when Charlotte died.

All of the known descendants of the Tucker family that lived to be adults were from, Henry Jr., Dudley, Howard and William. All of the Tucker sons and several of the daughters spent time in the newspaper business. Henry Jr. went into the oil business and spent most of the rest of his life battling with John D. Rockefeller's Standard Oil. For many years he owned and operated Uncle Sam Oil and had the leases on a large part of northeastern Oklahoma.

Dudley, William and Howard all stayed in the newspaper or printing business. They operated the Pointer in Oklahoma City in the early days. The Oklahoma Publishing Company, publishers of the "Oklahoman", controlled by Edward K. Gaylord, tried to force the Tucker boys out of the newspaper business. This led to fist fights and eventually the carrying of guns for protection. Apparently the Tucker boys had enough of Henry's fighting spirit in them, they didn't back down. Finally to eliminate the competition, Gaylord bought out the Tucker brothers' Pointer.

As another added note, living descendants of Scout Barney Day have been located.

Now, on to the story of Scout George B. Clark and his family.

Scout George Burgess Clark was born in Iowa. During the Civil War, George served with the 7th Iowa Calvary, Company G. At the same time, his father, Amaziah B. "Amza" Clark, was serving with Company D, 37th Regiment, Iowa Infantry, better known as the Grey Beards, due to their mature age (all over 45, some over 60 years old) and his brother, John Leo Clark, was serving with Company C, 1st Iowa artillery. It is possible that Amza Clark was guarding the Rock Island Prisoner of War Camp, while Scout Thomas Alderdice and his future brother in law, Huston/Houston Anglin were incarcerated there.

George with the 7th Iowa Cavalry spent the war in the west. Some of the locations where they served were;

Fought on 3 Sep 1863 at Sackett's Station, DT.
Fought on 16 Aug 1864 at Smoky Hill Crossing, KS.
Fought on 2 Sep 1864 at Plum Creek, NE.
Fought on 8 Sep 1864 at Fort Cottonwood, NE.
Fought on 18 Sep 1864 at Fort Cottonwood, NE.
Fought on 4 Dec 1864 at Cow Creek, KS.
Fought on 7 Jan 1865 at Julesburg, CO.
Fought on 18 Jan 1865 at Fort Heath, NE.
Fought on 8 Feb 1865 at Rush Creek, NE.
Fought on 3 Jun 1865 at Boyd's Station.
Fought on 14 Jun 1865 at Horse Creek, DT.
Fought on 29 Oct 1865 at Alkali, NE.
Fought on 26 Jan 1866 at Black River, KS.
Fought on 14 Jun 1866 at Horse Creek, DT.

I don't know that George was in all these battle, but at least some of them. He settled in Ottawa County, Kansas, near present day Tescott, following his service during the Civil War. While living along the Saline River, in Ottawa County, he met and married Lucinda Jane Tripp, daughter of one of the earliest settlers in that area. Lucinda's parents, William and Elizabeth Tripp were in the Tescott area prior to 1864. They had taken up the abandoned cabin of James R. Meade, an early trapper and trader on the plains. Meade abandoned his property near Tescott, and moved south to establish Towanda, Kansas and was among the earliest settlers in what would become Wichita, Kansas. He later served as President of the Kansas Historical Society.

Scout George Clark signed on with Col. Forsyth at Fort Harker, Kansas and was wounded in the ankle during the battle of Beecher Island. This wound would trouble George the rest of his life. Upon returning to the Saline Valley and farming and ranching there until sometime after 1875, the family then moved to Deep Well Township, Hamilton County, Nebraska, where they are found in 1880, and George is listed as a brickmaker.

Later the Clarks moved a little west and lived in or near Grand Island and later, Ogallala. George for some time operated a freight line along the Platte.

In early 1896 Lucinda Jane Tripp Clark died. An obituary states she was buried in the Ogallala City Cemetery, but there is no record of her burial in city records. When she died, she was the mother of 13 children. In 1898 when Scout George Clark died, he was listed as being the father of 10 children. It is still unknown if three of the children had died between Lucinda's 1896 death and George's 1898, or if the writer of George's obituary was in error.

Several of the children had moved to the area of Wolf Point, Montana in the late 1880's. Some of the younger children did move to Montana after their parent's death, and at least two went to California to live with an older sister and her family. Daughter Elizabeth Clark, married William Blair and moved to Iowa. As complete as possible accounting of the Clark family follows;
